

Summer Reading
Grades 11 & 12 – Class of 2018 & 2019
Downers Grove South High School

Dear Class of 2018 (Grade 12) and Class of 2019 (Grade 11) students,

This year we are combining our reading list for grades 11 and 12. We also would like to offer you more voice and choice by providing you with two different options for selecting a book to read for your required summer reading.

- Option 1: Choose a book from the suggested list for Grades 11 & 12

- Option 2: Choose your own book (fiction or nonfiction), but the book must meet all of the following criteria in order to be used to complete your summer reading assignment for class:
 - Criteria 1: Book must be a minimum of 250 pages in length
 - Criteria 2: Book must be categorized as either “young adult” or “adult” (in other words, no children’s books)
 - Criteria 3: Book must not have been made into a movie or TV show
 - Criteria 4: Book must not have been on any past or current summer reading lists
 - Criteria 5: Book must not be a required read for any school related curriculum here at DGS in English or any other content area

When you get back to school in August you will be required to complete a graded assignment in your English class related to your reading. In order to help you prepare for that assignment, we would like to give you a reading focus. No matter which level, which class, or which teacher you have in the fall, your summer reading assignment will be based on the reading focus listed below. Though not required, you may choose to annotate and/or take notes in regards to the reading focus to help you with the assignment you will do in class.

Class of 2018 (Grade 12) & 2019 (Grade 11) Reading Purpose/Focus Question:

As you read, note what choices the author makes to engage the reader and make the book enjoyable. You may wish to consider some of the following: character development, conflicts, themes or issues addressed, imagery, setting, plot structure, point of view, style, word choice, etc.

Class of 2018 (Grade 12) & Class of 2019 (Grade 11) Book List

Lexicon* by Max Barry

Emily Ruff is studying to become a “Poet,” someone who can manipulate the actions of others by uttering a few well-chosen words. Wil Jamieson is one of the few people who cannot be controlled by the “Poets,” and this resistance places him in the middle of a clash between rival “Poets.” Their stories converge around an ancient artifact that could ultimately expand the “Poets’” control over the entire planet, or destroy them completely.

Lock In* by John Scalzi

FBI agent Chris Shane isn’t the average rookie. When he is on the job, he really isn’t on the job. Or at least, his body isn’t. Shane is just one of millions of Americans suffering from Haden’s Syndrome, a virus that ultimately incapacitates victims’ bodies if it doesn’t kill them first. Physical limitations haven’t stopped Haden’s from living; Haden’s can download their mind into an android, or they can integrate for limited amounts of time with a host body (an Integrator). On his first day of work, Shane and veteran agent Leslie Vann are assigned to investigate a murder at the Watergate Hotel. But the prime suspect is an Integrator, which means that ultimately it is a Haden responsible for the murder. Or is it? And why? Maybe a rookie doesn’t know what to expect on the job, but Shane could never have predicted where the leads on this case might take him and how truly dangerous unmasking this killer might be.

City of Saints and Thieves* by Natalie C. Anderson

“If you’re going to be a thief, the first thing you need to know is that you don’t exist.” Tina is willing to follow this rule; since the night her mother died on the Greyhill estate four years ago she hasn’t really been living anyway. Or rather, all she has been living for is revenge. If being a thief can help her exact said revenge, then she’ll be the best thief the Goondas, Sangu City’s ruling street gang, has ever known. Especially if the Goondas can help her take down prominent businessman Roland Greyhill, the man she believes is responsible for her mother’s death. The plan Tina has concocted seems foolproof. What she couldn’t predict, however, is that Michael would be home the night she breaks into the Greyhill home. What will the son of her sworn enemy do? He’s the one holding the gun. But maybe if she plays her cards right...

Highly Illogical Behavior* by John Corey Whaley

In a panic during middle school, Solomon Reed stripped down to his boxers and sat down in the water fountain outside the school. In front of everyone. In the three years since then, he has not left his house. It’s easier this way for him. Enter Lisa Praytor, a high powered, goal-driven junior in high school. She remembers Solomon and thinks she can help. She also thinks if she does, she will have the perfect experience for a college application essay that will earn her a spot in a prestigious university’s psychology program.

The Hate U Give* by Angie Thomas

What happens when you are the only person who knows the whole story but are afraid of the repercussions of telling the truth. Sixteen year old Starr Carter finds herself in this situation when her childhood friend, Khalil, is killed by a police officer after leaving a party. Starr is in the car when this happens and is immediately drawn into the spotlight as the sole witness to the events of that night. Starr has to decide what to say when she is called to testify knowing that any decision will impact her future, her family, and her community.

We Are Okay* by Nina LaCour

Marin has just finished her first semester of college in New York and decides to stay alone in the dorms over break rather than return to San Francisco to face the bad memories that haunt her. Her estranged best friend Mabel comes to stay with her, and over the next few days, she forces Marin to confront the past and deal with the events of last summer. Mabel also forces her to discuss their complicated relationship. Slowly, readers find out more about Marin's life and why she left, learning about the surfer mother who drowned when Marin, the father she never knew, the loving grandfather who raised her but kept secrets, and the painful events that nobody knew about until now.

The Book of Unknown Americans* by Cristina Henríquez

Arturo and Alma Rivera come to America, making great sacrifices, with the hope of helping their beautiful fifteen-year-old daughter, Maribel, become whole again after she survives a tragic accident that leaves her mentally impaired. The Toro family travels to America from Panama in hope of finding a better life for their family. When the two families end up living in the same apartment complex, a deep friendship forms between them. When Mayor Toro meets Maribel Rivera, he sees something in her that few others are able to see, causing him to fall for her. But a violent act causes both families to lose sight of what they came to America to do. Interwoven between chapters, we hear true life stories of “Forgotten Americans” as they share their experiences of being an immigrant in America. The stories explore the question “what does it mean to be an American?” through heartwarming and heartbreaking tales.

Reality Boy* by A. S. King

At 5, Gerald Faust had some pretty awful, violent tantrums. And the whole world had the chance to watch. The Faust family made a deal with a reality TV show called Network Nanny to allow their family to be filmed in front of the world's eye, and 12 years later, 17-year-old Gerald is a junior in high school and still paying for how the audience characterized him at 5. The trouble is, Gerald isn't that person anymore. Maybe, he never was. Now, he needs to deal with the echoes of his past, a family he begins to think is dysfunctional, and the possibility of someone liking him despite the network's image of him.

Joyland* by Stephen King

Devon is a college student learning the ropes as a carnival worker over the summer, and in this suspenseful thriller, he learns that years ago a girl was murdered in the Funhouse; her ghost supposedly still haunts the park. This coming-of-age tale of Devon's summer captures his experiences in overcoming lost love and turning the corner into adulthood to face head-on the beauty and complexities of relationships and ideas that challenge his reality, stretching what and who he believes in...even ghosts. Beneath the story of Devon's relationships unfolds a mystery that is different from most of King's horrors.

Sister* by Rosamund Lupton

Bee returns to her home back in London when she receives a call that her younger sister, Tess, is missing. Bee is the responsible older sister while Tess is the free-spirited artist. Bee expects to step in to scold her sister, but then her sister is found dead and the verdict is suicide. Bee refuses to believe that her sister would take her own life and, therefore, begins her own investigation. As Bee recounts her story to the lead investigator, the truth she uncovered involves an evil predator who got away with one murder. In the end, this may cost Bee her life, too. This story is about the strong bond between sisters. Sister is an exciting page-turner filled with suspense and a twist ending that is hard to predict.

The Night Circus* by Erin Morgenstern

"The circus arrives without warning." No bright colors, no advertisements and it is only open at night. This circus is like no other, and that is because it is the setting for a battle between two magicians – Celia and Marco. Celia was chosen by her father, Prospero the Entertainer, to take part in this battle because he believes that, with his training, she can defeat anyone. Marco was chosen by Prospero's archrival to defeat Celia. Neither Celia nor Marco knows that the battle will end in the death of the magician who loses, which is made all the more tragic when they fall in love. A haunting and magical romance where the circus is as much of a character as Celia and Marco.

Mr. Penumbra's 24-Hour Bookstore* by Robin Sloan

With the advent of the Great Recession, Clay Jannon's life shifts when he loses his job as a web designer in San Francisco and, out of curiosity, investigates a "Help Wanted" sign in the window of an unusual "24-hour bookstore." From the moment he meets Mr. Penumbra, who calls himself the "custodian" of the place and demonstrates his ability to climb a ladder to the farthest reaches of the bookstore's massive shelves, Clay knows this is no ordinary place. His intuitions are confirmed when odd customers begin to frequent the bookstore at all hours, coming in repeatedly but never actually buying anything. Instead, they search for impossibly obscure, forgotten volumes from the wayback areas of the store, and they all seem to be connected, though they never come in together. Suspecting that the store is a front for something larger, Clay embarks on a journey to discover the meaning behind his customers' behaviors and their arrangement with the mysterious Mr. Penumbra. His search extends beyond the walls of the store, as he calls upon friends old and new, and all the technology at their disposal to crack an age-old code and try to solve an impossible riddle. Sloan has written a book that manages delightfully to merge all the technological advancements and social media of modern day with an old-fashioned love of just the right book.

The Art of Racing in the Rain* by Garth Stein

This is a compelling story of Enzo and his family: a story about love, joy, and tragedy. Enzo, who has been educated primarily through television, is a very insightful and philosophical narrator who provides insight into the life of Denny, an up-and-coming race car driver who suffers the loss of his wife, Eve, and then the loss of his daughter, Zoe, through a brutal custody battle. From Denny, Enzo has learned that life is much like racing. From Enzo, Denny has learned about loyalty and commitment and perseverance. As Enzo's life comes to an end, he reflects on all that the Swift family has gone through and what he has learned, believing that he is ready to be reincarnated as a man. Enzo is a delightful story teller that mixes comedy with drama, providing the reader with an interesting perspective into the human condition. The reader almost forgets that Enzo is a dog.

Vaclav & Lena* by Haley Tanner

As children, Vaclav and Lena bond because both are immigrants from Russia who share a culture, experiences in ESL classes, and a love of magic. Vaclav has dreams of becoming a modern-day Houdini, with Lena as his beautiful assistant. They spend most of their time together until the day Vaclav's mother takes Lena home and realizes that the situation in her home is not safe for a little girl. Lena disappears from Vaclav's life--but not from his memory or his hope that someday their paths will cross and they will reconnect. Vaclav and Lena is a magical story exploring connections among friends, family, and fate.
